Johnson Earns Certification in Healthcare Risk Management

Jasper, Tenn. – Lori Johnson, currently the Risk Coordinator for Grandview Medical Center, recently earned her certification in professional healthcare risk management from the American Hospital Association.

Johnson earned this significant distinction after completing and passing the Certified Professional in Healthcare Risk Management (CPHRM) Exam in San Diego, California.

Johnson has been a Registered Nurse (RN) since 1971. She began working for Grandview Medical Center in 1998, assuming the responsibilities of risk coordinator for the hospital in 2004.

Those certified in Healthcare Risk Management provide health care patients with better advocacy and safer health management practices while in the hospital. Johnson also serves as the Patient Safety Officer for Grandview Medical Center and works closely with insurance carriers and attorneys.

“This is very much an honor for Lori and Grandview Medical Center,” said Holly Stewart, Johnson’s supervisor and director of Quality Resource Management at Grandview. “Many risk management personnel do not acquire this stringent certified status. Grandview Medical Center and our patients will greatly benefit from Lori’s new accreditation.”
